Pine Lakes reopens in Myrtle Beach

GOLFWEEK STAFF

Myrtle Beach, S.C. – Pine Lakes Country Club reopened to the public March 14 following a 20-month, $15 million restoration of the course and clubhouse.

Architect Craig Schreiner oversaw work on the course, a Robert White design that originally opened in 1927, when it was known as Ocean Forest Country Club. The club lays claim to being Myrtle Beach's first golf resort.

Schreiner preserved 16 of the original 18 hole corridors; he built two new holes to replace holes that had been eliminated to make way for a new entry into the club. The restoration included the planting of SeaDwarf Seashore Paspalum grass, use of environmentally friendly irrigation, enlarged tee boxes and the addition of native waste areas.

The antebellum clubhouse was restored and expanded, with the addition of a 6,000-square-foot wing to house the pro shop and locker rooms, the Robert White Pub, the grill kitchen and an outside patio.

The clubhouse also will be home to the Myrtle Beach Golf Hall of Fame, which was created by Burroughs & Chapin Golf Management, which operates the course, and Myrtle Beach Golf Holiday, which promotes tourism on the Grand Strand.
